Beware of fake job ads

The Philippine Overseas Employment Administration (POEA) warns job applicants of fake job advertisements circulated through e-mail and social media.

Deputy Administrator Aristodes R. Ruaro, POEA officer-in-charge said such fake job ads circulated in Facebook invites high school graduates to apply with the POEA for jobs in the United Kingdom such as domestic worker, laborer, room attendant, technician, spa therapist, tailor, car washer, driver, laundry attendant and building painter.

Ruaro said except for nurses under the Triple Win Project, the POEA is not recruiting other types of workers for UK.

The fake ad bears the logo of the Philippine Embassy in London, and instructs applicants to send documents such as updated resume, passport size picture and photocopy of passport to philemb.co.ok@gmail.com.

The real email address of the Philippine Embassy in London is embassy@philemb.co.uk.

Ruaro reminded job applicants to always verify with the POEA the authenticity of any job offers especially those found in the internet. /END
